CAT STEP AND CAMEL WALK WILL BE RAGE AT DANCES

Win Approval of Dancing Masters at National Association and Will be Introduced This Winter.

New York, Sept. 6.—The cat step and the camel walk were added to the list of new dances with the approval of the National Association of Masters of Dancing in annual session here.

The association also conferred its benediction on the chic walk, fox trot artistique and the triangle one step. The delegates optimistic about the future of their creations. Interest in dancing is much greater since prohibition, they say, and they are eager to furnish variety for patrons.

The cat step is a rather unusual dance. You step along rather cautiously for three or four steps or more and then to right and left with equal caution. These fundamental rules can be elaborated upon, of course, but one less adept can dance it with greatest ease.

In the camel walk the position of the dancers is the most important thing. They must stand very straight and the ballet step is incorporated. The chic walk is a modified one step, such as the French dance, and was inspired by the way so many of the soldiers danced when they returned home.

"The women's clubs and the dancing masters must join in the campaign to make all religious denominations realize that they should not put evil thoughts into the minds of their members by saying that, if a boy and girl dance together they are going to perdition," said Mrs. John Francis Yawger, general secretary of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, addressing the masters' convention.

"Our music also needs reforming," continued Mrs. Yawger. "If you take the wiggle out of music you take the wiggle out of the dance. As you all know, the work of club women since the war has been principally along Americanization lines, and I think that recreation is one of the best means of Americanization."

MISSOURI FACES HARD FOOTBALL SEASON.

Columbia, Sept. 6.—In athletic circles, this is the year of reckoning for the University of Missouri. After winning Missouri Valley Conference championships in three major sports out of four last year, the Tiger athletes face a hard fight in their effort to keep up the record.

Inasmuch as practice will not begin in earnest until about September 15, it is somewhat early to figure on Missouri's chance again to win the championship in football. Graduation and other causes of ineligibility took away some of the 1919 stars, and now it appears that the dependable Travis and Peterson, both counted upon to return, also will be among the absent.

John F. Miller, head Tiger coach last year, and M. J. Phelan, scout and assistant coach of 1919, will compose the Tiger teaching staff for 1920. Miller is in Columbia now, and Phelan is expected to return in a few days.

After playing Missouri Wesleyan and St. Louis University, the Tigers will open their conference season with a game at Ames on October 16.

Backs Road Bond Issue.

From the Trenton Times:

"The boldest strike made by Governor Gardner is the advocacy of a bond issue for $60,000,000 for good roads for Missouri. Already many counties have organized for this campaign, even better than they are organizing for the political campaign and it is a state bond issue and yet every county will get its share of the money, if it is organized and ready to use it."

CO-OPERATION.

Mr. Hughes, after visiting the Front Porch, testifies that "Senator Harding has a genius for co-operation." But co-operation with whom? With Mr. Taft or with Hiram Johnson? With the reservationists or with the Battalion of Death? With Boies Penrose or with Herbert Hoover? With the profiteers or with the people who pay the higher prices? With the protected industries or with the consumers? With the Progressives?

Thus far nothing has come out of the Harding genius for co-operation except dodging and hedging and evasion. The Senator might be a much more impressive figure if he were not trying to co-operate with so many antagonistic elements at once.—New York World.

Cow Testing Pays.

"The dairyman who practices good business methods and continually weeds out the poor cows is sure to increase his profits," says E. M. Harmon of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture at Columbia. "This point is very well illustrated by the following results from a recent summary of some of the herds for the first and second years' work in the Webster county Cow Testing Association.

Average milk per cow, first year: 5543; average fat per cow, 253.7; average profit per cow, $109.95.

Second year—Average milk per cow, 5730; average fat per cow, 297.7; average profit per cow, $121.87.

Increase—Average milk per cow, 193; average fat per cow, 26.9; average profit per cow, $11.92.

The records on these cows have very materially increased their sale value. In addition to that the owners have an accurate index on which cows to save and which heifer calves to raise. But even disregarding the above considerations, the increase of $11.92 per cow is much more than the cost of the testing, showing clearly that the cow testing association is a profitable proposition.

These men are gradually building their herds up to a point of real profit. They are doing it through their cow testing association. It isn't the man who makes one phenominal record and then quits who establishes himself as a breeder. It is rather the man who can start in and gradually increase his production and profit year by year.

FIGURES SHOW CITY SCHOOL CHILDREN EXCEL.

Columbia, Mo., Sept. 6.—Figures obtained from mental and physical tests of many thousands of school children are set forth, with suggestions for making futher tests, by William H. Pyle, assistant professor of educational psychology in the University of Missouri, in a revision of his "Manual for the Mental and Physical Examination of School Children," a bulletin just published by the Extension Division of the University. The object of the tests is to enable the teacher to know her pupils, according to Professor Pyle, as the mental age of a child does not always correspond to his actual age. In physical tests, city and country children rank about the same, according to the bulletin, but the city children excel in mental measures. Girls, as a rule, show a better mental development than boys of the same age.

Milk is Healthy

There is no substitute for milk. Growing children need it in generous quantities as it stimulates their growth and gives them the strength to resist disease, because it possesses "Vitamines" or "Butterfat," obtainable only in butter, milk, cheese and eggs.

It is a perfect food for adults as well. Not only is it appetizing, but according to scientists, promotes health and long life.

Do you want to add on weight?—drink lots of milk. Are you sick or ailing?—milk is easily digested and a strength-builder.
